COUNTY GOVERNMENT FACTS

Essex County was officially established by an act of the East Jersey Legislature in 1682. At that time, Essex was one of four counties which comprised present day New Jersey. Essex County has been governed by a Board of Chosen Freeholders since the early 1700's.

The term "Freeholder" originally meant landowner, and New Jersey is the only state in the nation which still refers to its county legislators by that term.

Originally, the Essex County Board of Chosen Freeholders was comprised of 32 members, two elected from each municipality. In 1919, it became a nine-member board, with members elected from throughout the County without regard to residence.

In 1977, the citizens of Essex County approved a change to the County Executive Freeholder form of government. Under the new form of government, five freeholders are elected from districts and four serve at-large. Every three years, an election is held to fill nine freeholder seats. The winners of the most recent Freeholder election have been sworn in.

The primary responsibility of the Board is to adopt, review, and monitor the county's annual budget, and to pass ordinances and resolutions necessary for the proper and good governance of the county. The Board approves most contracts and gives advice and consent to appointments of the County Executive of all Department and Division heads, the County Administrator, County Counsel, and members of all boards, commissions and authorities. The Board also has investigative powers to oversee the functioning of all departments of county government, as well as its boards, commissions, and authorities.

The Essex County Executive is the chief political and administrative officer of the county who is elected from the county at-large for a four-year term.

The County Executive is the visible representative of the county in dealings with the public, the business sector, and municipal governments. Further, the County Executive represents county interest through lobbying efforts on the state and federal levels.

The duties and powers of the County Executive are many and are defined in the County's Administrative Code as follows: to appoint the County Administrator, County Counsel, Department and Division heads, and members of all county boards, including advisory boards, commissions and authorities, all with the advice and consent of the Board of Chosen Freeholders; to hire all department employees; enforce the County Charter and all laws pertaining to the County; prepare an annual operating and capital budget; supervise the collection of revenues, and the audit and control of all disbursements and expenditures; negotiate contracts for the county, subject to the approval of the Freeholder Board; sign all ordinances, contracts, and bonds; as well as exercise veto power over any legislation, aside from the budget and certain other resolutions
